

Translation From
Moscow IZVESTIA, No. 162, July 18, 1924.

RESULTS OF THE INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE OF THE M.O.P.R.

Article by M. Minkov.

The First International Conference of the M.O.P.R. has ended its work. One of the most important acts of the Conference was the acceptance of the international Constitution of the M.O.P.R., which converts the M.O.P.R. into a mass non-party class organization of laborers, pursuing the aim of rendering material and moral help to the fighters of the revolution—victims of terror and vengeance of the bourgeoisie. Not less important is the election of the Executive Committee of the M.O.P.R. consisting of 28 representatives of various countries, because up to now the S.S.S.R. was predominant in the works of the temporary international center, but now participation of all countries becomes better balanced owing to the passing of this resolution.

The Conference paid great attention to the question of organization matters, having made it incumbent upon the newly-elected Executive Committee to introduce in all sections the system of mass membership of laborers in the M.O.P.R., the strengthening of the work among peasants, women, youths, the strengthening of the work both in colonial countries and in the countries with mixed population.

. . . .

In connection with the mass political emigration, the result of terror and oppressions in the capitalistic countries,

the

- 2 -

the Conference outlined a number of measures for the protection of political emigrants. Special attention was paid also to the questions of agitation and propaganda and the utilization of press, cinema, theatres and proletarian organizations for the "deepening of the ideas of the M.O.P.R."

All resolutions of the Conference are directed towards crushing with a united proletarian front the yoke and oppression of world capital. It can be stated with complete confidence that the First International Conference will become a uniting center around which will rally the laboring masses of the entire world of the cause of relief of prisoners of capital.

The international proletariat impersonated in the international Conference laid the foundation of an international class non-party organization, which will inevitably become one of the detachments of the international revolutionary army under the banner of the Communist International.